Five Heartfelt Holiday Gift Ideas

Experience the joy of giving on a whole new level this year

As the holiday season ramps up to a frenetic pace, somewhere underneath the tinsel and credit card bills is a cry for a meaningful way of celebrating. Here are five gift ideas that will create memories to cherish long after the month is over.

Night at the Movies

Craft a “movie kit” basket with some of your recipient’s favorite snacks. You can include a gift card for a streaming service or they can choose their favorite flick to share together with you.

Picture this

Take a photo of yourself or a memory together and create a photo keepsake through an online printing service or even a puzzle from sites like Shutterfly. Another twist on this idea is to take a photo of a favorite landscape, be it one they’ve visited or wish to, and make it black and white while blowing it up into a lovely wall print that can be framed as meaningful art.

Book it

Take a dog-eared copy of your favorite book and personally inscribe it to them, detailing why you love it. Sharing something so close to your heart will certainly touch theirs.

Don’t Stop the Music

Create a personalized playlist of songs and burn it to a CD with a self-designed album cover for them to enjoy. You can alternatively make a playlist on Amazon or another site and then send them a gift card to download the tunes.

Letters From Home

Write a series of letters of memories and thoughts and package them nicely together. Then whenever they miss you or feel lonely, they can pick one up and read it. For a digital option, you could record a series of videos where you speak the same content or show parts of your daily life. This is especially valuable for long distance relationships.
